Qatar’s Legal Framework of Migration

Gulf Labour Markets, Migration and Population

GLMM - EN - No.4/2018
Abstract: Over the last decade, Qatar has significantly revised its legal framework in a number of areas that are relevant to the issue of migration. The revision has led to the establishment of rules and regulations that better conform to international standards in areas such as labour rights and human trafficking. However, Qatar’s controversial kefala (sponsorship) system is still a source of concern. This note offers researchers a succinct outline and summary of Qatar’s legal framework on migration. The system of migration-related legislation in the State of Qatar includes the Constitution, international treaties concluded, national laws and by-laws.

Keywords: Qatar; Laws and Regulations; Irregularity; Migration; Citizenship; Trafficking; Sponsorship; Labour Rights.

The Permanent Constitution of Qatar was enacted in 2004 and replaced the constitution that had been in effect since the country’s declaration of independence. In 2009, Qatar adopted a new law regulating the entry, exit, residence, and sponsorship of expatriates. Under this law, expatriates still require the sponsorship of a Qatari national (typically their employer). They must work for their employer for at least two years before they are allowed to find a new employer and transfer their sponsorship after obtaining a clearance letter from their sponsor. The sponsor also has control over whether or not his/ her expatriate employee obtains an exit visa and whether or not they are banned from the country for two years.

* This is a revised and updated version of “Qatar’s Legal Framework of Migration,” Explanatory Note No. 2/2016, available here: http://gulfmigration.eu/media/pubs/exno/GLMM_EN_2016_01.pdf.pdf
In 2015, Qatar repealed this law and enacted a new one, which it claimed would introduce significant changes to the sponsorship system. In reality, it did little more than change the terms used for “sponsor” and “sponsorship,” replacing them with “recruiter” and “responsibility,” respectively. Under this law, the employer can still exercise control over the exit of the foreign employee from the country. The foreign employee may submit a petition to the exit petitions committee to contest the decision of the employer or the competent authority prohibiting him from exiting the country. The transfer of employment is still subject to the approval of both the employer and the Ministry of Labour.

In 2018, this law was amended by Law No. 13 of 2018 Amending Certain Provisions of Law No. 21 of 2015 Regulating the Entry, Exit and Residency of Expatriates. Under its provisions, expatriate workers who fall under the purview of the Labour Law may exit the country temporarily or on final exit, without requiring the consent of their employer. The employer is granted the right to specify five per cent of his employees who need to acquire pre-approval before leaving the country due to their nature of work. An expatriate worker who is not allowed to exit the country for any reason can petition the Expatriate Exit Grievances Committee, which shall decide on his petition within three working days.

As recently as 2011, a new law on combating trafficking in persons that prohibits all forms of trafficking and prescribes sufficiently stringent penalties, as well as improved identification of trafficking victims, was adopted. The crime of trafficking in human beings is broadly defined to include activities within the state territory and across its national borders and a wide range of forms of exploitation.

Law No. 14 of 2004 (Labour Law) sets minimum standards for employment in areas such as working hours, vacations and public holidays, health and safety, and termination of employment. Employees excluded from the application of the Labor Law include domestic workers, casual workers, and working members of the employer’s family.

An amendment was introduced to the Labour Law in 2015, requiring employers to transfer salaries directly from their local Qatari accounts into a Qatari account in the name of the employee. In the same vein, Qatar enacted a new regulation introducing a wage protection system applicable to employees who are subject to the Labour Law. Employers are required to transfer salaries to the bank accounts of employees within seven days of their due date or face penalties.

In 2017, the Labour Law was further amended by Law No. 13 of 2017 Amending Some Provisions of the Labour Law Promulgated by Law No. 14 of 2004 and Law No. 13 of 1990 Promulgating the Civil and Commercial Proceedings Law. The introduced amendments set up the procedures for dispute settlement of individual workers’ complaints through a specialised Committee established under the law. The procedures enable the worker to seek an amicable settlement to the dispute through the Labour Relations Department or the Human Resources Department at the Ministry. Should that fail, the worker may petition the Workers’ Dispute Settlement Committee headed by a first instance court judge. The Committee’s decision has executory force. The worker may, however, appeal the Committee's decision before the competent circuit at the Appellate Court.

The new law promulgated in 2005 on Qatari nationality allows expatriates to apply for Qatari citizenship if they have resided in the country for a minimum of 25 years, have a clean criminal record, good knowledge of the Arabic language, and make a good living. Under the new law, Qatari women may sponsor their foreign spouse and children if they meet certain conditions but they may not transmit Qatari nationality to them.

In 2017, Qatar enacted Law No. 15 of 2017 Regarding Domestic Workers. Under this law, workers may only be recruited on the basis of a written contract, which must be certified by the administration. A translation of the contract may be annexed to the original Arabic text and the worker must be given a copy of it. The law sets a maximum limit on working hours of 10 hours per workday and guarantees a weekly rest day, three weeks of annual leave, and an end-of-service payment.

Irregular Migration

Human Trafficking

Penalizations: Anyone who commits the crime of human trafficking is penalized with imprisonment for a term extending up to seven years. The Qatari law uses the same definition of human trafficking as the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime. Moreover, under this law, any person who forces another to work for him (paid or unpaid) is penalized with imprisonment for a term extending up to six months and a fine not exceeding three thousand Qatari Riyals, or one of these two penalties (Law No. 15/2011, Combating Trafficking in Human Beings).

Protection: The law exempts victims of human trafficking from penalties prescribed by Law No. 4 of 2009 on the Regulation of the Entry, Departure, Residence and Sponsorship of Expatriates (Law No. 15/2011, Combating Trafficking in Human Beings).

Oversight: In 2017, Qatar enacted Ministerial Decision No. 15 of 2017 establishing a National Committee for Combatting Human Trafficking. The Committee’s purpose is to monitor and combat human trafficking through coordination with relevant authorities through clearly defined activities (Art. 4).

International Agreements regarding Irregular Migration

- Palermo Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons (acceded to on May 29, 2009).

Family reunification: An expatriate worker may obtain residence permits for his/her spouse, male children who have not completed their university studies up to the age of 25 and for unmarried daughters (Law No. 21/2015 Regulating the Entry, Exit, and Residence of Expatriates). The minimum monthly salary of a resident requesting family reunification is 4,000 Qatari Riyals (Article 1 of Ministerial Decision 45/2001).

Access to real estate ownership: GCC nationals may own property in investment areas and under the conditions determined by a decision of the Council of Ministers (Article 2 of Law No. 17/2004). Non-GCC citizens may own property in the following locations: the Gulf Pearl Island, the Western Gulf Lake Project, and Al-Khor Resort Project (Article 3). A non-Qatari may also have the right of usufruct over real estate for a term of ninety-nine years renewable for another term (Article 4).

Limited social rights for foreign nationals (strike participation/organisation and union participation prohibited).
Legal Framework of Migration

Withdrawal of Qatari nationality

Withdrawing Qatari nationality may take place in a number of circumstances including among others, acquiring the nationality of another country (Law No. 38/2005 on the Acquisition of Qatari Nationality).

Naturalization

Naturalization is possible after 25 years of continuous residence in Qatar if certain other conditions are met (renunciation of original nationality required). Priority in obtaining citizenship is given to those who have a Qatari mother (Law No. 38/2005 on the Acquisition of Qatari Nationality).

Women married to Qatari nationals can acquire Qatari nationality after five years of marriage (Law No. 38/2005 on the Acquisition of Qatari Nationality).

International Agreements

The extradition of political refugees is prohibited and conditions for granting political asylum are to be established by law (Article 58, The Permanent Constitution of Qatar). No law implementing this provision has been enacted thus far.

International agreements related to international protection: Qatar has not acceded to the 1951 Convention relating to the status of refugees.
